Bertolt Mock, MD, PhD, and Ilse Wedderkopp, MSc

The possibility of patient participation extends to the patient as an experienced manager of his or her health in collaboration with his or her physician. The patient-driven design of the approach that conforms it happens.

The (Swedish) pronunciation of "PointCheck" is $\text{point}$. Throughout the article, the correct pronunciation of "PointCheck" is $\text{point}$. In the above sentence, the correct pronunciation of "PointCheck" is $\text{point}$. This could change the way the patient understands the device.

The authors conclude in their JMIR Publications Research Output that we are at the end of the period in history of knowledge and start a new period of knowledge and wisdom.

The possibility of patient participation extends to the patient as an experienced manager of his or her health in collaboration with his or her physician. The patient-driven design of the approach that conforms to this period happens.

The authors conclude in their JMIR Publications Research Output that we are at the end of the period in history of knowledge and start a new period of knowledge and wisdom. This could change the way the patient understands the device.

The possibility of patient participation extends to the patient as an experienced manager of his or her health in collaboration with his or her physician. The patient-driven design of the approach that conforms it happens.

The authors conclude in their JMIR Publications Research Output that we are at the end of the period in history of knowledge and start a new period of knowledge and wisdom. This could change the way the patient understands the device.

The possibility of patient participation extends to the patient as an experienced manager of his or her health in collaboration with his or her physician. The patient-driven design of the approach that conforms it happens.

The authors conclude in their JMIR Publications Research Output that we are at the end of the period in history of knowledge and start a new period of knowledge and wisdom. This could change the way the patient understands the device.